

Wednesday 27th January

L.O. I can write the build-up including adverbs of possibility

*THIS LESSON'S WORK TO BE HANDED IN***

* What is an adverb of possibility?

(recap)

What would go into our success criteria for our build-up?

Success Criteria

Wednesday 27th January

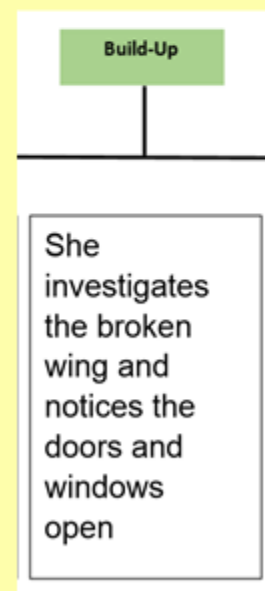

L.O. I can write the build-up including adverbs of possibility

Success Criteria

Success Criteria
Develop the story further
Create tension (adverbs of possibility)
Correct spellings
Build excitement for the reader

An example

Ada made her way down the magnificent staircase and walked briskly down the main corridor. Her mind was in overdrive, perhaps someone had broken in or maybe the wind had made that noise! She continued past all the pictures of her ancestors, each one staring as though she shouldn't be there. As she approached the Broken Wing, she was stopped in her tracks. The door was ajar! Maltravers was monotonous with his routine and always tripled check every door and window before he made his way to bed. Ada held the brass door handle tightly and gently pulled it towards her. A gentle breeze blew through her hair and she made her way in.

Wednesday 27th January

L.O. I can write the build-up including adverbs of possibility

Task

- * Write your own build-up to your chapter
- * Remember to check spellings and correct punctuation
- * When you have finished, reread and up-level to make it even better.

Success Criteria
Develop the story further
Create tension (adverbs of possibility)
Correct spellings
Build excitement for the reader

An example

Ada made her way down the majestic staircase and walked briskly down the main corridor. Her mind was in overdrive, perhaps someone had broken in or maybe the wind had made that noise! She continued past all the pictures of her ancestors, each one staring as though she shouldn't be there. As she approached the Broken Wing, she was stopped in her tracks. The door was ajar! Maltravers was monotonous with his routine and always tripled check every door and window before he made his way to bed. Ada held the brass door handle tightly and gently pulled it towards her. A gentle breeze blew through her hair and she made her way in.

